

Tradition meets appreciation.

Tradition means responsibility. Tradition means dealing conscientiously and responsibly with changes. Tradition needs future. Tradition needs reflection.

For more than 430 years, the social commitment has been stimulus and obligation for the people who carry on this heritage and are working on its future. For more than 430 years, the Juliusspital has fostered the passion and innovation of its staff for quality and social commitment. You can see that in what we are doing.

Wine needs personality.
Quality needs identity.

Wine is part of our culture – drinking wine is pure pleasure. Those who have owned great vineyard sites and have produced outstanding wines, know also how a good wine must taste.

We, the staff of the Juliusspital, create wines with authenticity and freshness, with great care and passion. For generations our high quality wines have grown on the most distinguished sites of Franconia: Würzburger Stein, Randersackerer Pfülsen, Iphöfer Julius-Echter-Berg, Rödelseer Küchenmeister and Escherndorfer Lump.

We attach greatest importance to the protection of the environment - which means for us sustainability and foresight for future generations. It is our duty to always maintain a reliably high quality – our goal is to create outstanding wine personalities.

According to the Financial Times we are among the 100 leading wine estates of the world. We are proud of this. We are wellknown – because quality gets around. We ship our wines to four continents and 26 countries and can compete internationally with leading wineries.

Over 170 hectares of excellent vineyards are for us, now and in the future, a challenge to create wines with personality and character – for the enjoyment of all wine lovers who appreciate individuality and origins. And, of course, for the enjoyment of our vintners and wine makers who are very keen on cultivating high quality wines.

The Juliusspital Wine Estate – passionate and dedicated since the beginning.
